During the genocide in Rwanda in 1994, an estimated 250,000 women and girls were raped and maimed, and many were killed. Quite a few have given birth to the children of the men who raped them, and as a result they are struggling not only with the consequences of violence, war, and destruction, but also with feelings of guilt and rejection towards their unwanted daughters and sons.

In 2005 Kathrin Groninger created the Abiyubaka women's forum together with KANYARWANDA and SEVOTA – the name Abiyubaka means "People who help each other". All of them have given birth to children of the men who raped them. The Arte TV reportage gives insides to the work of Kathrin Groninger together with this forum.
